DEATH LIST WILL REACH 75

Seventy-three deaths and at least nine persons missing and believed dead, is the flood toll in five southern States, according to latest reports.

While the floods of Sunday did untold damage to factories, business houses, roads, railroads and crops in Western North Carolina, the fact over which everybody was most concerned was the loss of over 25 lives. Four were lost at Biltmore, two at Asheville, three at Marshall, two at Volga, four at Bat Cave, three at Fruitland, one at Chimney Rock, four at Brevard and two unknown bodies were seen floating down Rocky Broad River at Bat Cave. These had not been recovered and were thought to have come from some point in McDowell county. This loss of life is deplored and it doesn't seem possible to many that the death toll could have been so great. Many acts of heroism are recorded, and many acts just as great will never be known.

The list of known dead:
Marie Freeman, Fruitland.
Isaac Conner, Fruitland.
Seven year-old son of Tilden Freeman, Fruitland.

Mrs. Edgar Huntley and two children, Bat Cave.
Miss Stacy Hill, Bat Cave.
Capt. J. C. Lipe, Biltmore.
Miss Charlotte Walker, Biltmore.
Miss Mabel Foister, Biltmore.
Miss Marion Walker, Biltmore.
M. V. Hall, Chimney Rock.
Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell Sentelle and daughter, Brevard.
John Heath, Jr., Brevard.
James Guthrie, Marshall.
Unknown child, Marshall.
Miss Susie Collins, Volga.
Miss Polly Collins, Volga.
Luther Frazier, (col.) Asheville.
Walter A. Trexlar, Asheville.
Two unknown men seen floating down river at Bat Cave.
